REVIEWED BY: Mr Intolerance

Our heroine Morrigan is an artist, who rather unwisely decides to stay in one night, when asked to go on a night out with the girls, and then she gets a home invasion by a bunch of real arse-holes.

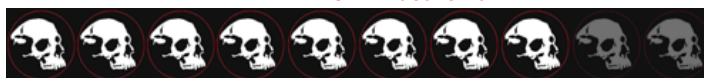

But who are the arseholes, and who is the painter? Therein lies the writer's and the director's surprise, and one I didn't see coming, and one I won't spoil for you. Perfect Red is a classy and clever piece of work, and one I thoroughly enjoyed.

This is definitely worth checking out, and I'll certainly be keeping an eye out for more of this writer's and this director's work. I'm a great lover of short horror, and this was 13 minutes of well-spent viewing; better than most of the bloated excesses of the Masters of Horror series. Top shelf stuff.
